Working Brides is a chic wedding planning firm based in Washington, DC, specializing in glamorous South Asian weddings. Known for their staggering professionalism, warm demeanor and keen knowledge of South Asian traditions, it's no wonder they've quickly become a favorite in the desi community.

In the beginning stages, they ensure that the bride, groom and family enjoy a stress free planning process while staying within their set budget. The added perk being that, regardless of your budget, your wedding will be unlike anything your guests have ever seen! Working Brides works with the bride and groom creatively, poring over every aspect and this dedication to details is evident in the finished product as each wedding is executed innovatively with imaginative twists while maintaining a strong sense of tradition for one hundred or one thousand guests, Working Brides makes sure each guest is taken care of and that every component of your event is carried out timely and efficiently. Owner Trisha Cranor says that they are most frequently commended on their timely flow. With comments like, "We have never been to an Indian wedding where everything was on time! Your team is so organized and the flow is effortless," their widespread popularity is understandable. At the end of the day, she knows that they have done a fabulous job when the bride and groom are beaming and Mom and Dad are basking in the glory of compliments on a flawless event. What more could a working bride ask for?

Since the success in the DC metropolitan area has been so overwhelming, Working Brides has now gone nationwide, serving desi brides in Florida, Texas and beyond. So feel free to spread the word that Working Brides does travel, bringing praise and prestige wherever they go.
